Youth invited to register now for after-school job academies

Resumes, industry training and hiring events featured at week-long trainings

Greenwood Village, Colo. --- The Arapahoe/Douglas Works! workforce center is now accepting applications for youth, ages 14-21, to participate at no cost in week-long, after-school job academies in April. The academies will be held 4:30-6:30 p.m. daily, April 12-16 and April 19-23 in Greenwood Village, Littleton and Aurora, as well as April 26-30 in Castle Rock.

The academies will focus on helping youth participants gain job-ready skills, such as work values, resume and cover letter writing, interviewing skills and how to present themselves in a professional setting. Each academy also will have an industry focus, highlighting child care, retail, customer service, hospitality or parks and recreation.

“Local youth are always invited to take advantage of the no-cost job-seeker and educational services at Arapahoe/Douglas Works!, but these new job academies are sure to offer participants a unique competitive edge to finding and keeping a great job,” said Arapahoe County Commissioner Jim Dyer.

Youth who complete the week-long job academies will be invited to participate in special hiring events on the Saturday following their academy. The workforce center welcomes any interested employers to participate in the hiring events to seek work-ready youth job candidates.

Space in the academies is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis. To register, please visit www.adworks.org or call 303-636-1160.

Arapahoe/Douglas Works! is a workforce center providing a full spectrum of resources and services to those looking to maximize their professional potential and search for gainful employment.
