Broncos Parkway construction to resume with warm weather

Construction on Broncos Parkway delayed due to weather conditions, will resume with warm spring weather

Centennial, CO --- Arapahoe County and commuters are looking forward to the warm weather as it will allow for the road widening along Broncos Parkway to resume.

The project extends from Peoria to Potomac streets and consists of widening Broncos Parkway to six lanes from four to serve as an alternative route to alleviate some of the congestion on Arapahoe Road. Work also includes the installation of a waterline, new storm drainage and two traffic signals.

The project began June 2009 but the construction project faced delays due to the abnormally wet summer and early winter. Once ground temperatures reach 40 – 42 degrees and the sun and wind help dry out the muddy conditions, the project can begin again.

The County estimates major construction will resume mid to late April, assuming weather conditions continue to improve. It is estimated that the project will be completed by the end of June. Project funding comes from Arapahoe County and the Dove Valley Metropolitan District.
